VOL. LXVI., No. 24. NEW YORK, December 10, 1904. WHOLE No. 1715

THE FACT

that ROBERT NEILSON STEPHENS'S latest romance,

THE BRIGHT FACE OF DANGER

has gone to press for the seventh time warrants our asking you to see that you have sufficient stock of this important novel to last you through the holiday season.

BECAUSE

the newspaper articles by ELLA WHEELER WILCOX are read every day by a million people does not necessarily mean we will sell 1,000,000 copies of

but, as we have just gone to press with another large edition, it looks as though our predictions of a popular demand for this book will be realized.

JUST TO MENTION TWO OF OUR MISCELLANEOUS PUBLICATIONS,

Have you noticed that

THE ART OF THE LOUVRE

by MARY KNIGHT POTTER, who wrote that very successful art book,

"THE ART OF THE VATICAN,"

bids fair to out-sell any of the many art books published for the holiday season? A gift book which will sell all the year round, because it is also a work of reference for the art student and the traveller, is one you may safely carry over, and its purchase in reasonable quantities is therefore an investment, not a speculation.

JOSEPHINE TOZIER'S

is increasing its sales every week over the sales of the week before. The constantly growing demand for the most delightful record of a trip through rural England is proven by the fact that re-orders from many of our customers are larger than the original order taken by our salesmen.

JOHN CECIL CLAY'S

In Love's Garden

"In Love's Garden" is the exquisite elaboration of a droll fancy. Maidens fair of every zone are turned to flowers; in picturing them thus Mr. Clay has made a marvelously attractive volume, after the heart of all lovers of beautiful women and beautiful books.

Designed and executed by John Cecil Clay. Printed on special paper, with more than forty drawings in color, 8 x 11 inches, decorated cover. $3.00 (in a box.)

THE NEW CHRISTY-RILEY BOOK

Out to Old Aunt Mary's

Uniform with the Famous Christy-Riley Book "An Old Sweetheart of Mine." This is the first publication of the complete version of the famous poem, consisting of twenty stanzas, of which fourteen have never before been printed.

By James Whitcomb Riley, with forty illustrations by Howard Chandler Christy. Beautifully decorated. Printed in two colors. Octavo, cloth, boxed, $2.00.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY'S NEW BOOK

A Defective Santa Claus

This is an entirely new poem, or rather continuous narrative in verse, in Mr. Riley's happiest vein and matchless child dialect. The book is fragrant with the kindly spirit of Christmas, of childhood's innocence and human love.

Profusely illustrated by Will Vawter and C. M. Relyea. Bound in ornamental cloth, 12mo, $1.00 net.

MASTERPIECES

The Best New Novels

A New Novel by Emerson Hough

THE LAW OF THE LAND

"The Law of the Land" is a masterpiece. Totally unlike any preceding literary production in plot, style and treatment, it stands pre-eminently superior to any literary creation of the day."—New York American.

By Emerson Hough, author of "The Mississippi Bubble." With six illustrations by A. I. Keller. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Publishers

BLACK FRIDAY

Frederic S. Isham's
A splendid new novel by the author of "The Strutters" and "Under the Rose."

The speculative convulsion in New York at the time of Jay Gould's career in gold, President Grant's intervention, and the volcanic eruption of the Paris Commune are among the great dramatic events on which Mr. Isham has based his new romance.

"In 'Black Friday' the romance is stimulating, and the pictures of the street, and its thrilling, pulsating life, are drawn with rare power."—Boston Herald.

By Frederic S. Isham. With six drawings by Harrison Fisher. Cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Publishers

ZELDA DAMERON

Meredith Nicholson's
A sparkling tale of America, today, by the author of "The Main Chance."

"In this new story the author of 'The Main Chance' keeps up his good work along the same lines as in his earlier book, and turns out a rattling tale of social and commercial transaction, which commands attention from start to finish. The reader regrets the advent of the last page."—Washington Star.

A remarkably beautiful book. With portraits of the characters in color by John Cecil Clay. Cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Publishers

THE MAN ON THE BOX

Harold MacGrath's
New Gay Romance

Piquant, dashing, gay, "The Man on the Box" will win you instantly and bring you lasting joy.

Harold MacGrath knows how to compress a wonderful lot of charm and action into his pages, and the interest never flags.

By Harold MacGrath, author of "The Purple Crown," and "The Gray Duck." Illustrated by Harrison Fisher. Cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

The Diseases of Society

By G. FRANK LYDSTON, M.D.

An outspoken book on phases of the vice and crime problem before untouched. Written by a prominent physician who has made social conditions a special study. Its object is to show the origin, development, and influence of the anarchist, criminal, sexual pervert, and the great number of offenders against the moral law in society-at-large whom the courts do not reach. The oppression of wealth, the rights and wrongs of organized capital and labor, the negro question, and the crimes which have grown out of it, are discussed. The social evil is approached with the purpose of telling the truth and suggesting remedies. It is the most sweeping and fearless book on social ills and criminology which has yet been put in print. Profusely illustrated by selected photographs from the author's large collection and other sources.

8vo, cloth. Price, $3.00 net. Postage extra

Modern Industrial Progress

By C. H. COCHRANE

Tells in an entertaining way, free from technical expressions, of the great achievements in science and manufacture of the past few years and up to 1905. Explains how Marconi's victory was realized, and all the electric marvels of the decade. In a series of stories, the principal lines of manufacture are taken up, and the processes shown, from the receiving of the raw material to the turning out of the finished product. The airship, mono-rail, and other great inventions are included. The forty-three chapters cover the whole field of industrial progress. Splendidly illustrated with half-tones (400 in all). 650 pages. Decorated cloth.

Large 12mo. Price, $3.00 net. Postage extra

On Holy Ground

By REV. WILLIAM L. WORCESTER

A series of Bible stories put up in very attractive style for young readers. The text is accompanied by over three hundred superb illustrations of the Holy Land. Each story is introduced by helpful explanatory notes by Dr. Worcester, who brings to the work twenty years of experience as a Bible teacher, and an extensive personal knowledge gained by travel in Bible lands.

“ANDY”

By LUCILE LOVELL

Author of “THE WALCOTT TWINS”

The greatest book of its kind since “Little Lord Fauntleroy”

For Children and Grown-Ups

THERE is something about the downright, fearless and trusting little Andy that no one can resist. How he wins people to him and how he learns to be just the right sort of a boy is told with a delicate pathos and rare humor. Altogether it is a very unusual story of a very unusual boy.

NOTES IN SEASON.

A. S. BARNES & Co. will publish next week "In the Days of Shakespeare," by Tudor Jenks. This is the second volume in The Lives of Great Writers series, and is uniform with "In the Days of Chaucer," by the same author, the first book in this important series.

A. C. McCLURG & Co. will have ready in a few days the fourth edition of Randall Parrish's popular book, "My Lady of the North." They have also bought out the fifth edition of Mr. Parrish's attractive romance, "When Wilderness was King;" a second edition of Clarence S. Darrow's "Farmington: An Idyl of Boyhood;" and a second edition of "When Little Boys Sing," by John and Rue Carpenter.

McCLURE, PHILLIPS & Co. publish to-day (the 10th inst.), Miss Tarbell's intensely interesting "History of the Standard Oil Company;" also, Hugo Muensterberg's "The Americans," translated from the author's German volume, "Die Amerikaner," by Edwin B. Holt, of Harvard University. They will bring out on the 15th inst. Cyrus Townsend Brady's "Indian Fights and Fighters," which has been unavoidably delayed. They have just published a third edition of Kate Douglas Wiggin's and Nora Archibald Smith's anthology of poetry, "Golden Numbers;" a second edition of Myra Kelly's humorous stories of school life east of the Bowery; "Little Citizens," and a second edition of Mrs. Burnett's fantasy of childhood, "In the Closed Room."

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have just ready "The Memorials of Edward Burne-Jones" by his widow, in two volumes, with forty photographs; the new and greatly enlarged edition of Mr. James Bryce's "The Holy Roman Empire;" "Modern Charity Systems" by Professor Charles Richmond Henderson; and "Studies in Montaigne," by Miss Grace Norton, in two volumes. These will be the last of the important books which The Macmillan Company will bring out this season. They will publish shortly a book entitled "On Becoming Blind," a translation by Dr. Carroll E. Edson of the work by Dr. Emile Javal, Member of the French Academy of Medicine, which has had a great success in Paris since its publication a year ago under the title of "Entre Aveugles." It consists in advice and counsels to persons who have lost their sight or are in danger of losing it.

FOX, DUFFIELD & Co. announce for early issue a collection of "Letters of Henrik Ibsen." The translation into English is the work of Mr. John Nilson Laurvik, and a preliminary instalment of it will appear in the next number of The International Quarterly. The entire collection, which has been made by a son of the great dramatist, with his father's sanction, covers a period of about fifty years, from 1849 to 1898. Among those to whom letters are addressed are King Charles of Sweden, Georg Brandes the Danish critic; Bjørnesterne Bjørnsen, William Archer and Edmond Gosse; as well as an interesting circle of less celebrated friends. Written during the period of Ibsen's greatest literary activity and commenting freely on whatever work he happened to have in hand, from "Peer Gynt" and "A Doll's House" to "Hedda Gabler" the correspondence is said by those who have seen it to be intimate and personal in an unexpected degree.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

 The prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded by this list by a double asterisk **, and the word net follows the price. The prices of fiction (not net) published under the rules are preceded by a dagger †. The prices of net books not covered by the rules, whether published by members of the American Publishers' Association or not, are preceded by a single asterisk, and the word net follows the price.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.: translations, c. tr.: n. p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (2mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tl. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. 48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., mar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Aldrich, T: Bailey. Judith of Bethulia: a tragedy. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1904. [N.] c. 4+98 p. il. D. cl., **$1 net.

This play is in part a dramatization of the author's narrative poem, "Judith and Holofernes." Though it contains lines and passages from the story, the drama is essentially a distinct work, dealing with characters, incidents, and situations not to be found in the poem. Judith is portrayed as a woman full of tenderness, mercy and refinement, but who is impelled by religious fervor and love of country to do a deed of great daring. Miss Nance O'Neill is now playing the drama in New York.

Andrews, Harvey T. A manual of the United States customs laws, consisting of the U. S. revised statutes, the customs administrative act and special chapters on protest and appeal, reappraisal proceedings before the board of general appraisers, [etc.]; also a digest of federal court decisions, [etc.] N. Y., G: W. Dillingham Co., [1904.] c. 28+5-945 p. O. shp., *$10 net.

In presenting this manual to the public the author has had in mind the difficulty experienced by members of the bar and others who have occasional necessity for correct information on customs matters. Therefore, whenever sections of the Revised Statutes or other laws have been repealed or amended by subsequent legislation those portions have been omitted. If there is any doubt as to the repealing or effect of the amendments both laws have been incorporated. The notes to the customs administration act have been collected with great care and labor, and it is hoped that they will fill every want of the lawyer and merchant, as well as the government officer."—Preface.

"Punch" was the nickname of James Brooks, the son of poor negroes in the South, in the seventies. When fifteen he left home to avoid a cruel stepmother and drifted to Richmond. His story is typical of the fortunes of the free negro of the South. He was vacillating and passionate and easily led by women. He happened to know one very good one who sacrificed much to make a man of him, and finally succeeded.

Thomas Moore's Life of Lord Fitzgerald was exhaustive. Still, his descendant has found new letters which he thinks give facts that will add to the esteem in which Lord Fitzgerald, a martyr to his love of Ireland, is now held. Especially he thinks they will put in favorable light the often misunderstood actions of Lady Pamela, his wife, who was educated by Madame de Genlis and at one time supposed to be her daughter. Lord Fitzgerald was born in 1763 and was only thirty-five when he died in prison in 1798 from wounds received while fighting with his friend O'Connor for the emancipation of Ireland.

The first part of this volume is a revision of the paper prepared by the author for the celebration of the centennial of the adoption of the Constitution in 1889. It gives an account of the conditions existing at the close of the Revolutionary War, shows the weakness of the old Articles of Confederation, and traces the successive steps by which the patriot leaders brought the States to agree upon a general convention. Then it presents the main points of the debate by which the several sections of the Constitution were finally shaped and settled. The second part contains an account of the Monroe Declaration of 1823 and a study of the Monroe doctrine as time and events have developed it.

A study of the negro question in the light of the past and the facts of the present by a Southerner who has devoted years of thought to the problem, and who strives to present his views candidly and temperately. The book is divided into chapter headings as follows: Slavery and the old relation between the Southern whites and blacks; Some of its difficulties and fallacies; Its present condition and aspect, as shown by statistics; The lynching of negroes; The partial disenfranchisement of the negro; The old-time negro; The race question; On the solution of the question.

Parker, Frances. Hope Hathaway: a story of western ranch life. Bost., C. M. Clark Publishing Co., 1904. c. 4+408 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A ranch on the upper Missouri is the scene. Hope Hathaway antagonizes her father and more especially her mother because she will not marry her cousin. To avoid him she leaves home, becomes school teacher and merges her fortunes with the people with whom she "boards." Gives fine descriptions of cattle ranches and of sheep farms, which are looked down upon by the cattle men. A love story binds together most interesting facts and situations.

According to the wish of Dr. Babcock's family no full life of him has been written; hence this sketch of his career, prepared originally for the students at Auburn Seminary by a life-long friend, will serve for a more extended biography. Dr. Babcock was pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church in New York, and died very suddenly in 1901 while travelling in Europe.

Ruskin, J. Letters of John Ruskin to Charles Eliot Norton. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1904. c. 2 v., 14+261; 10+243 p. pors. D. cl., **$4 net.

The editors of the final complete editions of Ruskin's works (Longmans, Green & Co.) were urgent to have these letters for complete publication in one of the volumes. Dr. Norton preferred to select and edit them himself. They cover from 1855 to 1887 and are of intimate nature, discussing the changes that took place in Ruskin's views of art, religion and life and freely criticising the attacks upon him for his peculiar work in political economy and reform. Beginning where "Præterita" ended they form a valuable addition to Ruskin's autobiography.

The author was Major and Surgeon of United States Volunteers in the Spanish-American and Philippine wars and was also with the Allied Armies in the Boxer Campaign in China. He arrived in Tokio on June 20, 1904, with letters to leading men and had unusual opportunities to study Japanese warfare. His special object is to call attention to the marvellous arrangements made by Japan for the health of her army. "Soldiers should die from bullets received on the firing-line and not from preventable diseases in quarters."

Much of this diary appeared in the Badminton Magazine. It is kept for one year by a sportsman who, however, has interests of varied kind. He introduces anecdotes and reflections about new women and things, customs, superstitions and places, while through all runs the love of animals and sport and criticisms of hunting habits, sporting laws, etc., and descriptions of beautiful rural scenes. His wife, Belinda, accompanies him to country dinners and country houses, and she is also very original in her ways of looking at common things.

This work was prepared for publication some years ago and was intended as an offering of gratitude to the memory of the Wadhams. Circumstances have, however, prevented its publication until now and in a simpler form than at first planned. Dorothy Wadham, a contemporary of Queen Elizabeth, undertook at the age of seventy-five "to found, build, constitute, regulate and govern, down to the smallest details, a college in the University of Oxford," carrying out the will of her husband. These letters give the history of the execution of this plan.

Wakefield, Frank H. Marriage-limited: a novel. Wash., D. C., Neale Publishing Co., 1904. c. 3-327 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A working out in fiction form of latter-day theories concerning family relations. Here marriages are seven-year contracts to be renewed at the will of both parties. A woman on marrying another man must hyphenate her new name with the names of preceding husbands, thereby preserving a record of her marriages, which by law cannot exceed five. A daughter must use the much-hyphenated names of her mother, until she herself marries. The plot centres in a mysterious burglary and in the peculiar actions of a suspected man.

Weyman, Stanley J. The Abbess of Vlaye. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1904. c. '03, '04. 8+423 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A story of the summer of 1595 in the times of Henry of Navarre. The king had for the second time embraced the Roman faith and his Huguenot subjects had become his bitter enemies. In a family divided against itself were two brothers and two sisters, one of the latter being the Abbess of a convent in one of the ideal spots of France. She was haughty, tricky and learned, but love conquered all her strength of mind, and her machinations to gain the man she desired caused almost all the events in a very involved plot. Her younger sister is a charming character.

"It is now, and ever has been, the custom for treatises on Education to be written by pedagogues and celebrities, and by and among themselves. Scarce one of the really wise and worthy ones is an affair for the ordinary parent. This little book is intended as a comment on education and the present educational situation, from the point of view of a parent, and is, as they say in the colleges, primarily for parents, but open to pedagogues and others."—The introduction.

The father of D'Arcy Amyas had been in the Royal English Navy. He could not find a place for his son in the navy so placed him in the merchant service and he in time became captain of various liners running to China, Australia, etc., during his years of service. He was an uncontrolled, dissipated man, and the details of his conduct are scarcely fitting for fiction intended for general reading.

Ystridde, G. Three dukes. N. Y., Putnam, 1904. c. 7+407 p. D. cl., **$1.20 net.

Story of a pretty English girl who goes as a governess into the family of an eccentric and grim Russian noble. Her pupils are both over twenty, and their mother, an ignorant, hysterical woman, is most anxious to get them married. The "three dukes" are three lovers, attracted by the beauty of the governess and the imaginary dowries of her pupils.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 10, 1904.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE A. L. A. COMMITTEE ON BOOK-BUYING.

At the St. Louis Conference of the American Library Association a report was presented from the Committee on Relations with the Book Trade, printed elsewhere, which deserves careful attention from the book trade side. In view of the fact that the temper of this committee at first had been rather inimical to the book trade, and that considerable antagonism between the library interest and the book trade has resulted, it is gratifying to note that the report was moderate and courteous in tone, and that it laid the foundation for a better understanding between these two important interests. The same committee has been continued under the title of Committee on Bookbuying, and it will continue to publish its post-card reports and recommendations, which are sent to libraries generally, and which the book trade will find reprinted in our columns as they are issued.

It is in every way to be desired that there should be frank and friendly relations between publishers, booksellers and librarians, all of whom are concerned in the important work of bringing books to the people. There is a good deal of misunderstanding within the book trade as to the function of libraries which sometimes seem to stand between booksellers and bookbuyers, but which, in reality, promote book buying instead of discouraging it. A better understanding should bring both interests into active comity. The aggressive attitude taken by the librarians at the state conference at Atlantic City the preceding year was met by equally definite action on the part of the American Booksellers' Association, which "called a halt" to any increase of discount to libraries. The librarians feel that, as large buyers of undoubted credit, they are entitled to a greater discount than the authorized ten per cent., especially in view of the fact that many lines of publications, they have thought, have not been reduced in price under the net system as they had been given reason to expect. Many of the trade feel that this discount might properly be increased to fifteen per cent., or that some latitude might be permitted which would enable a discrimination to be made in favor of the larger libraries that buy in large quantities, and, practically, for cash. Others feel that library purchasers should not have any larger, if so much, discount, and that the English method of denying discounts outside of the trade, even to libraries, is preferable.

What is wanted, most of all, is a thorough understanding of the position of all parties on such a question as this, which can often best be reached by personal conference. We trust, therefore, that during the coming year there will be a meeting and friendly conference amongst the members of the committee of the American Library Association and of corresponding committees from the American Publishers' Association and the American Booksellers' Association.

PUBLISHING AT THE AUTHOR'S EXPENSE.

THE publisher who is printing his "confessions" in the Boston Transcript has the following to say on "fake" publishing in his sixth contribution, printed in the Transcript for November 11:

"An innocent and ambitious good woman sent to me last year a form of contract that a printer who pretended to be a publisher had sent her to sign for the publication of a novel. In its unessential clauses it was like the usual publisher's contract; but it required the author to pay in advance a fixed sum for the plates and for the manufacture of one thousand copies; and this sum was just about twice what they should cost him. Then he was to pay her not the usual ten or even fifteen per cent. royalty, but fifty per cent. on all copies sold—as well he might; and, if at the end of a year the book had ceased to sell, she was bound to buy the plates from him at half cost. The meaning of all this translated into figures is this: The plates would cost him $250, for he does cheap work; a thousand copies of the book would cost him $200, for he makes cheap books; total, $450. She would pay him in advance $900. He has a profit so far of $450. He does not expect to sell any of the books. Her friends would buy perhaps as many as two hundred copies. They would not be on sale at the bookstores—except in her own town. At the end of the year she would pay him again for the plates half what he charged her at first—which is just what they cost him. By this time she would have paid just three times their cost to him. Her outlay in the whole transaction would be:

|----------------------------------------------|--------|
| For plates.....                              | $250  |
| For 1000 copies.....                         | 200    |
|                                              | —$450 |
| His income would be: Her prepayment.....     | 900    |
| Her purchase of the plates a year later..... | 250    |
|                                              | —1150  |
| His profit.....                              | $700  |

"He would not have even to make any outlay of capital. She supplies the capital and he makes his $700 profit by writing her a few letters. If any of the books were sold he would receive also half what they brought. She would have spent $1150, less what she received for the few copies that were sold. Her book would not have been published—only printed at an excessive cost. . . .

"The long list of books—chiefly novels—that these pseudo-publishers put out tells a sad tale of misdirected energy and of disappointed hopes. A man—oftener it is a woman—conceives the notion of writing a novel. She works alone. She shuts herself off from life about her. Any human being who spends months at a self-imposed secret task becomes profoundly, even abnormally, interested in it. The story grows—or flows; for the author becomes more fluent as she goes on. She is likely to accept all the stories of extraordinary successes that she reads in the literary journals as if they were common successes. She goes on working by herself with no corrective companionship. At last she sends it to a real publisher and gets a disappointing decision. She imagines a thousand reasons why she is not appreciated. She sends it to another, and so on. The story of the wanderings of 'David Harum' in manuscript has given courage to thousands of worthless novels—a courage to travel to the last ditch, and the last ditch is the pseudo-publisher. 'Yes,' he writes, 'it is an unusual story;' and he will be greatly honored to publish it, and sends one of his remarkable contracts.

"To get the book published by anybody will bring her recognition, she thinks. The public will be kinder than the publishers. She takes the risk—sometimes goes into debt to do so. That is the end of the book, and in most cases the end of the author's career. The work begun in loneliness has ended in oblivion—wasted days, wasted dollars, wasted hopes.

"Yet what is an author to do who believes in his own work when it is refused by the regular publisher? Publish it himself or let it remain in manuscript. Never permit it to be brought out by a publisher to whom any suspicion attaches.

"There is not much danger (I do not believe there is any danger) that a manuscript of any value whatever will under present conditions fail to find a legitimate purchaser. But one way out of the difficulty that authors often seek is to propose to a legitimate publisher to publish his book at the writer's expense; and it is not apparent to the layman why the publisher cannot afford to make such arrangements. 'If the author pays the bill,' he says, 'the publisher will surely lose nothing.' But the publisher does lose, and loses heavily, every time he publishes a book that is not successful in the market. A publisher cannot afford to accept a book that will not itself earn a profit. If the author pay all the cost and a good profit besides, even this does not change the case; for unsalable books clog the market and stop the wheels of the publisher's whole trade. He soon begins to lose influence and standing in the booktrade. The jobbers buy new books from him in smaller quantities. The booksellers become suspicious of his judgment.

"Last year, to give a true instance, a publisher put out four new novels by four new writers. His salesmen and his advertising man announced them as good books. They made enthusiastic estimates of them. The book dealers ordered liberally. Three out of the four failed to make any appreciable success. The dealers had many copies of them left on hand. This year, when the same publisher brought out two more new novels by two more new writers, his salesmen met with incredulity and indifference. The booksellers said to them with a sad smile, 'We'll swap copies of your last year's novels for these.'

"Now it so happens that both of these new books of this year are good and popular. A demand for them was made as soon as the reviews appeared and people began to read them. But the booksellers were ill supplied. They would order only a few copies at a time—or none. Thus the good books of this year suffered because the publisher's dull books of last year failed to bring profit or satisfaction to anybody. They stood in the way of this year's better books.

"While, therefore, no legitimate publisher wishes to reduce his business to a mere commercial basis, and while he is eager to maintain the dignity of his profession—must maintain it in fact—and do as high service as possible to the literary production of his time, yet he can not load down his list with many books that have not a good commercial reason for existence.

"The plausible proposition which is so often made in these days of universal authorship—to publish books at the author's expense—is for these reasons not a sound proposition. If the book succeeds there is no reason why the author should make the investment. If it fail, the publisher loses, even though the author settle the bill; and he loses heavily.

"A writer who asks a publisher to bring out a book that has no commercial reason for existence is asking him to imitate the 'fake' publisher. The 'fake' publisher could not make a living, (since he has no character and cannot sell books,) except by cash payments from his authors. As soon as a publisher begins to receive cash payments from his authors, (be the basis ever so legitimate,) he begins to clog up the outlets for his product. He has taken the first step towards 'fake' publishing.

"In a word, commercially unprofitable books may be printed, but they cannot be published without ruining the machinery that they are run through. He is the best publisher who has the largest proportion of good book on his list, (whether his list be long or short,) that are at the same time alive in the market.

"There are—let it be said as an exception—a few classes of books that every publisher wishes to have on his list in spite of the fact that they cannot be made profitable, such as works of great scholarship or monumental works that have a lasting value. It is legitimate that the writers or the societies or organizations under whose direction such books were written should pay or share the cost of their manufacture. But few such works yield a profit at last to either publisher or author. And they are not made to clog the book market. They are sold only to special classes of readers.

"A book is a commodity. Yet the moment it is treated as a mere commodity it takes severe revenge on its author and on its publisher.

"These pseudo publishers sometimes solicit manuscripts from ignorant writers. They have veiled advertisements in the literary journals. Ignorance and ambition is a susceptible combination. Several years ago one of these plausible swindlers bribed a reader in one of the larger publishing houses to report to him the names of all the writers whose novels were declined there. The fakir then lied them with circulars and letters.

"While I have been writing about publishing swindles I have been reminded of the accusation brought several years ago against publishers—especially English publishers—that the temptation to fraud was too strong to be resisted by any but the most upright and successful men. An author gives his book to his publisher. Twice a year the publisher makes a report—pays royalties on the number of books that he has reported as sold. There is no way whereby the author can verify the publisher's reports. He has to take his word for it. Even if the author or some one who acted for him were to see the publisher's books, he could learn nothing, for the publisher's bookkeeping is a very complicated thing; and reports of book sales could easily be 'doctored.'

"This chance for fraud does exist. But the first wish of every normal man in the business, even if he lack vigorous honesty, is to make his reports of sales to his author as large as possible. This wish is too strong to be overcome by anything less than the most hopeless moral depravity. A publisher who should commit the crime of making false reports to his authors would be a monstrosity. Yet the contention that Sir Walter Besant made in England for so many years that the publishing business was conducted without such checks and verifications as are applied to other business transactions was true; and I, for one, see no practical remedy for it."

THE AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION ON RELATIONS WITH THE BOOKTRADE.

At the recent St. Louis Conference of the American Library Association a report was presented by the committee on relations with the booktrade, reviewing the systematic effort made for a year past to improve methods of bookbuying among libraries. This committee was appointed with the intention that it should secure and communicate to librarians from time to time information regarding the discount limitations on library purchases, and give advice as to "methods of avoiding the hardships of the net price system." A mailing list of one thousand names of persons not reached through the ordinary library publications was prepared, and the Bulletins of the committee, issued from month to month in postcard form, were sent to those names, in addition to receiving publications in the library periodicals.

The committee says: "The contents of the bulletins, of which we have sent out eight, have consisted, in accordance with our instructions, partly of information and partly of advice. Under the former head we have printed a description of what the net price system is, with statistics showing that it has raised book prices to libraries, also figures showing that the same book is often sold at a lower price abroad than in this country; we have given the names of reliable importers and second-hand dealers in this and other countries; we have given the titles of valuable aids to bookbuying; we have shown statistically the value of the library booktrade; we have pointed out the proper procedure in importing books, in buying at auction and in saving money by using special forms of bindings. Finally, we have called attention to certain public measures prejudicial to the interests of libraries, notably to Senate bill No. 5314, amending the copyright law so that libraries may not import books that are copyrighted in America, without the author's written consent, and the recent Treasury ruling requiring written receipts for all articles imported duty-free.

"Under the head of advice, we have urged librarians to spend more money in importation and in the purchase of good books at second-hand and by auction. Besides these specific items of advice others may be inferred from our paragraphs of information. It was thought best to make no formal division between the two, and in fact, as may be seen from an examination of the bulletins themselves, their contents is presented without special arrangement or classification and in the most formal manner, the main object being to reach librarians quickly and effectively.

"It is a pleasure to record the reception that has been given to these little bulletins. We have had much evidence of their acceptability to librarians, both in the demand for them from unexpected sources and in voluntary letters of commendation from members of our profession. We have been aided in our distribution by the library commissions of the States of Wisconsin, Indiana, Connecticut, New Jersey and Iowa, who have undertaken to see that the smaller libraries in their respective States are supplied with the cards.

"In making our preliminary announcement, the committee stated that if there seems to be any practicable method by which libraries may secure better discounts directly, such as by business combination or engaging directly in the book business themselves it would investigate details and report results as soon as possible.

"Your committee is of opinion that there is no inherent impossibility in the formation of such a combination or company. The practical difficulties are the necessity for a considerable amount of capital and the lack of some one possessing both time and interest sufficient for the promotion of such an enterprise. Even the small amount of work done by this committee during the year is no inconsiderable tax on the time of busy men, but if there is some librarian who is willing and able to devote a much larger part of his attention to the matter than we have been able to do, we believe that the results may be interesting and worthy of further and more detailed consideration.

"As regards any direct result upon the publishing trade or the booktrade of what we have done or what is likely to be done along the same line, we may say frankly that it is not apparent. And although we have not been unmindful of the possible results of a demonstration that the library trade is worth something and that its diminution or diversion into other channels means a loss to somebody, at the same time we feel that immediate relief from the hardships of the net price system must come from what the librarian may do toward adjusting himself beneath the burden, not by ineffectual struggles to throw it off, nor yet by attacks upon those who imposed it.

"Combination, in one form or another, is the order of the day, and librarians should not be slow to recognize the fact.

"If, instead of combining against each other, however, publishers, booksellers and librarians could work together for the common good, they might discover that their aims and interests are not, after all, diverse. We librarians are perhaps in closer touch with the reading public than the members of any other profession. We believe that by stimulating the demand for literature and increasing general interest in the subject we have already helped the business of those who deal in books. But libraries could aid the booktrade not only generally but specifically. Publishers, for instance, spend thousands of dollars in the preparation of book lists which, if modified, librarians would be glad to circulate for them. This is only another way of saying that those whose interest it is to increase the reading of books should pull together and not against one another.

"We feel that one of the most effective ways to improve the situation will be to increase the membership of this Association and to make librarians feel that membership is connecting them in some way with efforts to aid them in their work along the lines that have been followed by your committee. We would, therefore, recommend the appointment of a committee to continue the work that we have begun, with definite instructions to send information along the lines followed by our bulletins of the past year, to all members of this Association, as well as to persons likely to become members; but to make it evident in the latter case that those who do not join cannot expect to profit indefinitely by our activity. That this may become thoroughly effective we suggest that the expense allowance of the committee be placed at $500.

"We believe that in this way the membership of this Association might be greatly increased, and that such enlarged membership of the American Library Association would be one of the most effective ways of promoting library combination and mitigating the hardships of the net price system."

INKLESS PRINTING.

"It may be remembered," says the London Stationery Trades Journal, "that a company formed (in London) to work a process of inkless printing, which it was predicted was going to supersede in time printing with ink, came to grief for want of funds to wait the time necessary to convince the world. Like many other processes which have gone under, it had in it the germ of a good idea which may grow up in other forms. It is not improbable that we may eventually see photographic processes developed on such lines that neither type nor ink will be required. Paper can be prepared very cheaply with sensitive material, and of late machinery for automatically exposing and developing it has been brought into use, so that the paper can be run into the machine from a reel and delivered in cut sheets with almost as much rapidity as a letterpress printing machine. Many of the photographic post cards are done in this way, and there is another company who have found it possible to sensitize and photographically print on ordinary newspaper, so that high class photographic prints direct from the negative may be used as insets for magazines, etc. Still further, the same principle has been applied to the making of engineers' prints. Mr. J. E. Goold, the chief of the photographic department of the Elswick Works, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, having designed a machine into which the sensitive paper is fed in from a reel whilst a boy feeds in at the same time the tracing to be printed. Powerful arc lamps throw their rays on the tracing whilst it passes slowly through with the sensitive paper, and when it comes out it passes into the developing and washing tanks. In this way about 200 feet per hour of cyanotype paper, of about 40 inches width, can be printed, 100 feet of ferro-prussiate paper, or about 60 feet of ferro-gallic paper. Instead of tracings, drawings and sheets of print or even lace can be run through and printed in the same way. A perfect impression of the whole length of a lace curtain can be obtained in this way."

SUGGESTIONS FOR REVISING THE COPYRIGHT LAWS.

IN the hope of arousing sufficient interest in copyright legislation to induce Congress to take some action during the coming session, looking toward the revision of the copyright laws, Mr. Thorvald Solberg, Register of Copyrights, prepared as a rider to his recent Special Report on Copyright Legislation, a bibliographical and chronological record of all movements in Congress relating to copyright from 1789 to date. In line with this endeavor to secure intelligent discussion of the revision of our copyright legislation, Mr. Solberg has prepared a special edition of the laws as they stand to-day,* giving the Revised Statutes relating to copyrights, followed by the corresponding sections of the Act of July 8, 1870, and in parallel columns the text of such subsequent legislation as bears upon the special subject-matter. This edition is printed on writing paper with wide margins, so that any one interested can make notes in relation to the legislation as it stands. Mr. Solberg would like to get the copies of this edition into the hands of all such persons as are really interested in the reform of our copyright legislation, in order that they may be annotated, and such memoranda become available if Congress should give an opportunity to consider such suggestions from persons practically interested in copyright legislation.

CANNOT BAR MILEAGE BOOKS.

By a decision of the Court of Appeals, rendered last week, the rule relating to New York State mileage books was settled to the effect that a passenger is entitled to ride to and from any and all points within New York State, regardless of whether his journey began, passes through or ends in another State.

The decision was rendered in the case of James T. Horton, a travelling salesman, who in 1890 was ejected from a train on the Erie Railroad. Horton received a verdict of $3000 and heavy costs, which was affirmed by the Appellate Division. Appeal was taken, which resulted in dismissal on the grounds that the action was for personal injury.

THE EXTRAORDINARY CAREER OF "BEN-HUR."

THE serious illness of General Lew Wallace, author of "Ben-Hur," brings freshly to mind the extraordinary career of this novel. Published by the Harpers on November 12, 1880, the book for the first year of its existence showed no signs of popularity, nor did its sale improve much in the second year. Then it began to grow, and has grown steadily, until now, twenty-four years after its first appearance, the sale is greater than it has ever been. The book succeeded on its own merits, and made its way not only with the American public, but with the people of many other countries in which foreign translations have been printed. Furthermore, and what is very remarkable in the history of this novel, it has never been issued in a cheap edition. Fourteen luxurious editions of the book have been published from time to time by the Harpers, but never a cheap one, as in the case of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the sale of which was, of course, greatly expanded by the circumstances under which it was published, many thousand copies having been issued in paper as a tract. No edition of "Ben-Hur" cheaper than the regular $1.50 form in which it was first published has ever been made. It is estimated that the book has now sold well on to a million copies; and the royalties from it, and from the play founded upon it, have made General Wallace a rich man. And every indication points to its continued popularity for years to come.

EXTRAVAGANCE IN PUBLIC PRINTING.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in his Message has the following timely and much-needed warning against extravagance in public printing:

"I call your attention to the great extravagance in printing and binding Government publications, and especially to the fact that altogether too many of these publications are printed. There is a constant tendency to increase their number and their volume. It is an understatement to say that no appreciable harm would be caused by, and substantial benefit would accrue from, decreasing the amount of printing now done by at least one-half. Probably the great majority of the Government reports and the like now printed are never read at all, and furthermore the printing of much of the material contained in many of the remaining ones serves no useful purpose whatever."

THE BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS held its annual meeting at the Sinclair House, New York City, on December 7, Charles Walton presiding. At the conclusion of the routine business a committee was appointed to draft resolutions expressing regrets at the death of Mr. James S. Baker, who was universally respected by the travelling men of the booktrade.

The twentieth dinner of the Brotherhood will be given, probably on the 30th inst., at a place to be determined by the Dinner Committee.

The officers for the ensuing year are John Black, president; Hermann Schulz, vice-president, and John Hovendon, secretary.

*The Revised Statutes Relating to Copyrights with notations of the provisions of the Act of July 8, 1870, and all subsequent copyright enactments, together with a list of all the United States Copyright enactments, 1783 to 1904, with notations of modifications, amendments and repeals, etc., prepared by Thorvald Solberg, Register of Copyrights, reprinted from the Report of the Librarian of Congress for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, 55 p. 4°.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE ANNOYANCE OF PREMATURE ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

SIR: Cannot something be done to put a stop to the practice of announcing a premature date of publication for works of fiction? We have in mind cases where publishers' advertisements have appeared in the different literary journals, reading, "Out today, for sale at all booksellers," when the facts were that the books would not be published until some weeks subsequent to the date announced.

When a prospective customer reads these advertisements, it is next to impossible to convince him that we are not in error when we state that the book is not yet published.

In some cases the customer goes so far as to state "that it must be published, as he has a friend reading it."

In this connection I desire to say, that I am satisfied I voice the sentiment of the majority of booksellers throughout the United States, as I find through conversation with them that they are laboring under the same difficulties. From my point of view, I cannot see in what way these premature dates set for publication can benefit the author, book or publisher. I trust that something may be done in the matter.

R. E. SHERWOOD.

OBITUARY NOTES.

WILLIAM KURTZ, well-known as a photographic and brush artist, and the reputed inventor of the three-color photo-engraving process, died on the 6th inst. at Far Rockaway, N. Y., at the age of seventy-one.

WILLIAM BLAIKIE, well known as an athlete, author of "How to Get Strong and How to Stay So," lawyer at 35 Nassau Street, New York City, and lecturer on physical culture, died on the 6th inst. at his home, 52 West Twenty-first Street, as the result of a stroke of apoplexy. Mr. Blaikie was born at York, N. Y., on May 24, 1843.

ADELIN SERGEANT, (Emily Frances Adeline Sergeant,) the novelist, died at Bourne-mouth, Eng., on the 5th inst. She was born July 4, 1851, at Ashbourne, Derbyshire, her father being the Rev. Richard Sergeant. Her mother, Jane Sergeant, published many verses and stories under the name of "Adeline." Emily Sergeant began her career by teaching, then became a member of the staff of the Dundee Advertiser, and finally devoted her entire attention to literature. She wrote many novels, perhaps the best known being "The Story of a Penitent Soul," which appeared in 1902.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Metropolitan Magazine announces contributions during the coming year from Rudyard Kipling, Anthony Hope, Joel Chandler Harris, Thomas Nelson Page, John Fox, Jr., Jack London, George Ade, A. B. Frost, Henry Hutt, Jules Guérin, Edward Penfield, George Gibbs, and many other well known names in the world of letters and art.

A NEW monthly publication, to be entitled Art and Life, is to be started in New York City under the editorship of J. M. Bowles. Its purpose is stated to be to "offer to the public month by month a digest of current happenings in the artistic world," so edited and selected "as to render the magazine intelligible and useful to that great majority of the American public who have neither the opportunity nor the means to devote more than a limited time to keeping abreast of the world's artistic progress."

WILLIAM ABBATT, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York City, will bring out early next year, possibly in January, the first number of the new issue of the old Magazine of American History, the re-establishing of which was projected two years ago, but delayed owing to other engagements of its projectors. The name of the new series will be that under which the publication first appeared in 1877—The Magazine of American History, with Notes and Queries. It will be issued monthly at $5 a year, 50 cents a copy. A number of well-known historical writers will be among the regular contributors.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN was the purchaser of the rare Mohawk Indian Prayer Book that was sold last week in the Hurst sale at Anderson's.

Everybody's Magazine, New York, has republished in pamphlet form the chapters of Thomas W. Lawson's articles on "Frenzied Finance," that have appeared in the magazine from July to November inclusive.

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish a facsimile reprint of the rare first edition of Bacon's "Essays," from the copy now in the British Museum. The date of the first edition is 1597, and no copy of it is known to be in America. The reprint will be as near the size of the original work as possible.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have in preparation a volume of love letters addressed to Victor Hugo by his lifelong friend, Juliette Drouet, during his exile in the islands of Guernsey and Jersey, 1850 to 1869. These letters were discovered by Henry Wellington Wack, the well-known authority on the Congo Free State, and will be published with an introduction by Francois Coppée, with a title as yet to be decided upon.

THOMAS WHITTAKER, New York, has just ready "Whittaker's Churchman's Almanac," for 1905, which enters upon the second half century of its publication, and at this point doubles the period of existence of its predecessor, the old Stanford & Swords Almanac. Mr. Whittaker has also upon his list this year the "Church Calendar," in scroll form, for hanging, the "Kalendar of the Girls' Friendly Society," and the "Calendar of Lessons for Prayer Desk and Lectern use."

MCCLURE, PHILLIPS & Co. have purchased from D. Appleton & Co. the plates and publishing rights of Stewart Edward White's early book, "The Claim Jumpers." They are now the publishers of the following books by Mr. White: "The Claim Jumpers," "The Westerners," "The Blazed Trail," "The Conjuror's House," "The Silent Places," "The Forest," "The Mountains" and "Blazed Trail Stories." They promise next season his new book, entitled "The Rawhide," now running serially in McClure's Magazine.

DICK & FITZGERALD, New York, will publish at once "The Gist of Bridge," a lucidly arranged digest of all that is up to date in the game of Bridge, by R. F. Foster. It will contain the American laws of the game, its objects and method of playing, and keeping the score, the "makes," "doubling," "leading," and instructive hints for second, third and fourth hand play, "return leads" and "discarding," also, the "eleven rule," dummy bridge, illustrative hands, and an interesting "problem" calculated to foster and develop analysis and skill.

A SPECIAL cover design was necessary for the edition of Lafcadio Hearn's last book, "Japan: an Attempt at Interpretation," sent to that country. This was because the ornament on the regular cover happened to be identical with the emperor's personal crest. In sending its order to the Macmillan Company, an American book firm in Tokio wrote:

"If you would only make these ornaments with fifteen or seventeen petals there would be no objection, but sixteen makes it an exact copy of the imperial crest. We had the same trouble with Menpes' book on 'Japan in Color' and were hauled up by the police."

A. C. McCLURG & Co. will publish early next spring a volume to be entitled "Beaconsfield—a Romance of Queen Victoria's Reign," written by an Englishman who closely followed the wholly exceptional public career of that remarkable man from its beginning to its close. The work is not to be classed among the ordinary novels, nor the historical fictions, nor the biographies, nor the studies of social and political life in England, because it is in truth a composite of them all. Disraeli must be portrayed as a man if he and his public life are to be fully and rightly understood. This is attempted in the form of carefully considered scenes gathered round the central interest in the private and public life of the great Prime Minister.

THE GROLIER CLUB, New York, will publish on the 20th inst., a work by R. T. H. Halsey, entitled "The Boston Port Bill as Pictured by a Contemporary London Cartoonist." The volume, an octavo, limited to 325 copies on hand-made paper, and three on vellum, will contain thirty-three illustrations in photogravure, one in the colors of the original, a portrait of George III. engraved in mezzotint by S. Arlent-Edwards, a wedgewood medallion portrait of Lord North and chapter headings, tail-pieces and initial letters by Francis S. King. The cartoons, evidently the work of a pupil of Hogarth, depicted certain events which had recently taken place in the Colonies, and were known in England through the publication of letters from America printed in the English press. The Bill, which closed the port of Boston on June 1, 1774, familiarly known as "The Boston Port Bill," was as severely attacked by the English as by the Colonial Press.

THE editor of The Academy and Literature offers a monthly prize, value one guinea, "for the best criticism of a specified book, the prize taking the form of a guinea's subscription to a circulating library." The Tribune editor thinks that "the subtlety of that prize is charming. The amateur's efforts are not to be hampered in any way by sordid thoughts of cash. Is he for any reason disinclined to subscribe to the particular circulating library nominated in the bond? Then the subscription can be transferred to another library, the fortunate object of his own choice. Is he already a subscriber? Then the guinea will run from the end of the subscription he holds or will be added to it at once. In any case he will be spared the degradation of coming in contact with even the symbol of cash, for the guinea check will never be sent to him. He will receive an order on the library selected, the money being forwarded with proper notification to the proprietors. Thus the temptations to spend the fruits of literary labor on material joys will be removed from the feeble minded competitor, and the dignity of letters will remain unspotted. But what especially appeals to us in this competition is the idea of deliberately adding to the world's stock of unnecessary chatter about books. The art of reviewing has been affronted enough as it is, in the columns of those newspapers and periodicals which care nothing for criticism but find profit in printing yards of treacherous 'notices, written by incompetents.'"

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, in whose satirical dialogue, "Six Persons," Miss Isabelle Irving is now appearing at the Proctor houses, is highly pleased with his vaudeville venture. The little playlet was produced under Mr. Zangwill's personal direction, and to a reporter for one of the New York dailies Mr. Zangwill expressed himself as being agreeably surprised at what he saw. Not only were the staffs at the various theatres anxious to extend him every aid, but he found the audiences as quick to appreciate the finer points of his satire as those who have attended the performances of his longer plays. As a result of his observation Mr. Zangwill declares the one act play to be the best form of art. "The mental impression received," he says, "is not unlike that which results from looking at a picture. There would be very little pleasure to the connoisseur in taking his view of a masterpiece in instalments, so to speak. He wishes to have the scene portrayed before him in its entirety, else he would lose the painter's purpose and go away with no sympathy for the artist and his motive. In a lesser degree the same thing may be said of plays. The curtain falls upon the first act. There is a break, a wait that gives the emotions aroused time to subside, and while the production may be enjoyed, it is neither so instructive nor so satisfying as it would be were the interest elicited continuous. This continuous interest is possible only in offerings like those that have become so popular a feature of the American vaudeville stage."

G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY, New York, have just brought out "A Manual of the United States Customs Laws," by Harvey T. Andrews, of the New York Bar. The volume consists of the United States Revised Statutes, the Customs Administrative Act and Special Chapters on protest and appeal, re-appraisement proceedings before the Board of General Appraisers. Reciprocity and articles on various paragraphs of the free lists together with the latest Department Regulations, all with complete notes brought up to date; also, a digest of Federal Court decisions." The whole subject is treated in a practical manner, specially designed to aid the lawyer, the merchant and the broker. The book contains the necessary blank forms to be used in connection with whatever the customs officers require. The work is one that has long been needed, the only other two works on the subject having been published in 1887 and 1894. The enactment in 1890 of the Customs Administrative Act and in 1897 of a new general Tariff Act have revolutionized the law relating to duties on imports and the procedure relative thereto, and the two older works are therefore necessarily not up to date. The laws of the United States confer upon the Secretary of the Treasury the power of making regulations for the enforcement of the customs laws not inconsistent with law, and it has been repeatedly held by the Courts that such regulations when not inconsistent with the law have the force of law. Mr. Andrews' work is of peculiar value in that it not only collates a large number of judicial decisions interpreting the Tariff Laws, but also cites quite extensively the rulings of the Treasury Department which govern the action of customs officers and which it is important for every customs broker, merchant, and lawyer to be familiar with. The book is sold only by subscription.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have just published a work on the "Diseases of Society," by Dr. G. Frank Lydston, of Chicago, an original investigator and widely-known writer in the scientific field, especially upon questions of medical science. His present work considers not only the police criminal, the anarchist, and the sexual pervert, but also that vast number of offenders against the moral and physical laws whom the courts cannot reach. It deals with the oppression of wealth, the rights and wrongs of organized capital and labor, the negro question, and the crimes which have grown out of it, and with the offences of "Society" at large. The book is written in a trenchant style and with regard only to the facts. It is based upon long and close study of the subject. Dr. Lydston is said to have had access to the police records and photograph galleries of many cities, as well as to the registers of asylums for the insane both private and public. His volume is profusely illustrated with reproductions from the photographs collected by the author. They have also just ready a handsome volume entitled "Modern Industrial Progress," by Charles H. Cochrane, which describes in plain, practical, and yet accurate manner what has been done in the last few years, especially in the field of invention and mechanical construction, and tells of the making of sky-scrapers, of armor-plates for the great guns, the discovery and application of the principles of wireless telegraphy, etc., all fully illustrated. An interesting presentation of the stories of the Bible so arranged and introduced that they appeal directly to the young reader has been prepared by the Rev. William L. Worcester, and is published by the Lippincott Company in a handsome octavo volume with the title "On Holy Ground." Dr. Worcester has not attempted to modify or change the language of the Bible, but has prefaced each story with sufficient explanation to make its meaning and its relation to the other stories entirely plain. The book is illustrated with over three hundred reproductions from photographs of the most interesting spots in the Holy Land.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

\ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.*

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

\ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.*

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

Holiday Book News

It is evident that EDITH BRENNAN is proving a popular heroine, for the demand for

has already exhausted three large editions. The fourth edition is on the press, and will be ready in a few days. In the meantime we ask the indulgence of the trade.

There is bound to be an increased demand for Mr. Parrish's great book during the next two weeks, and we urge the trade to order at once if stock is low, so that customers need not be disappointed at an awkward moment.

While on the subject of new editions, we call your attention to the following:

WHEN WILDERNESS WAS KING, by RANDALL PARRISH. The most attractive romance of the year for Christmas giving. Fifth Edition.

FARMINGTON, An Idyl of Boyhood, by CLARENCE S. DARROW. An ideal gift-book for people in middle life. Second Edition.
